Health center to raise fees to $100 a day

A new schedule of fees for medical and other services which will apply to both the present Dr. Torres Memorial Hospital and the new Commonwealth Health Center in Garapan was published this week in the Commonwealth Register.

The proposed fee schedule, to be effective on Nov. 1 would be established by regulation of the Department of Public Health and Environmental Services which operates both the present and the soon-to-be opened health center. The public notice of the new regulation, which includes $100-daily room charge for normal in-patient hospitalization, stresses "no patient shall be refused for service because of the patient's See page 8

Territorial governments are not capable of protecting federal and local funds from misuse, according to the Office of Inspector General in the Department of the Interior.

Assistant Inspector General Harold Bloom, in a memorandum to Assistant Interior Secretary Richard T. Montoya said the continued existence of many of the fundamental weaknesses in financial management in the territories "represents a failure by local officials to adequately assume fiscal responsibility."

Bloom also criticized the Office of Territorial and International Affairs (OTIA), headed by Montoya, for not exerting "sufficient leadership to resolve systemic financial deficiencies existing in the territories."

Bloom urged OTIA to "exert strong leadership" on the territories to ensure that government funds are used properly.

"Unless there are immediate steps taken to address the worsening financial management conditions in the territories, it is likely that general fund deficits and long-term debts will increase and misuse of alloted funds will continue," Bloom said.

Bloom's memorandum was sent to Montoya Aug. 12 following an analysis of audit reports issued by the Inspector General since 1982.

In his memorandum, Bloom said that over the years the Inspector General had been reporting the use of federal funds for unauthorized purposes, such as in the reduction of deficits. "Local funds have also been used for unauthorized purposes, and expenditures have exceeded authorized appropriations in some instances," he said.

He said internal controls were either unreliable (or ignore) or nonexistent. Recommendations to correct deficiencies were sometimes not implemented, and when implemented, were often reversed later or ignored by employees.

The analysis covered 165 audit reports con-See page 8

Lawyers list names of 700 TT employees who may receive pay

Attorneys Jesus Borja and Douglas Cushnie on Wednesday released the names of former and current employees of the Trust Territory government who belong to the same group as those who sued the government for discriminatory wage practices.

Borja and Cushnie represented the employees in the suit and won a judgment from the District Court regarding the unconstitutionality of the wage practice.

The following named individuals have been preliminarily determined as being members of the class in the class action suit of Temengil, et. al. vs. Government of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, et. al., Civil Action No. 81-0006, United States District Court for the Northern Mariana Islands.

The members of the class, as defined by the District Court on May 29, 1984, are all those 'Present and past employees of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands who have worked and are working within the territorial limits of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands since January 9, 1978, through the present and are classified in terms of race and national origin as Micronesian."

The proposed hospital fee schedule has been announced. It is based upon the increase nation and worldwide in the delivery of medical services. The Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands is no exception to this trend. We wanted a new medical facility and better medical services and WE GOT IT! ! Let us now learn to take charge of our share of responsibility in footing our fair share of the cost in order that we continue to receive "quality" medical care.

It is important to understand, however, that no one would be denied medical services (admission) because his/her inability to pay. THE BASIS FOR YOUR AD-MISSION IS YOUR HEALTH CONDITION! ! And although the hospital fee is for everybody, the people in the Admissions Division will determine how much you will actually have to pay. This brings us into another area.

The legislature is now considering the fate of a health insurance program. The obvious question is whether it should be left entirely in the hands of the private sector or should it be a semi-privatized venture: Employees in the private sector take health insurance policies from insurance companies while government employees join a government run health program. The legislature is reviewing this legislation carefully. It should be able to come up with a decision hopefully soon.

If in the end (for those who do not qualify for medicare and medicaid) we are required to pick-up a health insurance policy, it shouldn't be construed as another heavy burden in that we have tried paying for auto-insurance, including mortgage insurance, life, etc. It is really a minimal amount given our desire to stay healthy individually and collectively as a people. With the fad to stay fit and healthy, picking up an insurance policy for the protection of each member of our family shouldn't too steep a responsibility.

Assuming that we eventually must pay about $200 a day, it is still $240 cheaper than what the Guam Memorial Hospital charges our government for CNMI medical referees. This (Guam's fees) excludes our referees' air transportation and per diem. Across the nation, the average fee per day for hospitalization runs about $500.

The CHC facility has the state of the art equipment. Recently, Guam Memorial Hospital was debating the arcade scanner system that it has to replace. A scanner is a piece of medical equipment that is used to check your body for possible tumor, etc. Our equipment at CHC is ahead by ten years than what GMH plans to purchase.

Over the last six months, Dr. Jose Villagomez and Hospital Administrator Greg Calvo have persistently worked at retaining medical professionals for the eventual move to CHC. This major step in the right direction and other relevant efforts are all aimed at PROVIDING our patients with the best medical care possible. Villagomez, Calvo and Val Dortch have worked the clock to get everything in place so that our move to the new health center is carried out in the most convenient manner.

The moment of trush is indeed upon us: We must say adios to socialized medicine—a Naval Administration legacy that has done nothing but spoil our attitude as a hard working people. But what they had to do was perhaps a necessary evil—they came in first after the war and had to start somewhere.

Perhaps it wouldn't be such a bad idea to start a medical referral fund program where every family pays about $10 a month for service that you may need someday. That should generate about $240,000 a year for our medical referral program. It isn't a bad idea at all considering the number of referrals that we send off-island annually.

Finally, you must remember that although the fees for hospitalization will go up, the basis for your admission is your health condition. Rest assured that you will be given the medical attention that you need. You will soon see what the new facility is capable of providing through a video tour of the facility. It is far greater than what you have seen this side of the Pacific over the last 20 years. Indeed, 21st Century Medicine Is Here! !

road.

Dear Editor:

Citizen concern for cleanliness of our island roads is to be applauded. Cleanliness is a responsibility all of us can share since "we" are the "government." We can help by not littering and by picking up litter whenever we see it. The letter-writer in the Sept. 12 issue could have helped by explaining to the visitor that Saipan had just undergone one of the longest, sustained periods of rain in its history and that this may have caused the silt, sand and debris to be on the pride for what we have and less embarassment for those things that still need to be worked on. We are a new nation with many successes such as the new airport and its water catchment, more public housing, the new health center, Rota's high school, the telephone upgrading of system, school teachers and a responsive governor. And, we have roads!

We must show more

Let us not allow visitors who behave with tai respetu to make us ashamed of ourselves.

Sincerely,

/s/Aurelia Castro Camacho Alepuyo-Joyner Vice President, Decision Makers

LMA offers 3-year power program

Lyonnaise Marianas America, the local affiliate of the Lyonnaise group of France, has assured that it can solve Saipan's most urgent power needs within three years.

Solution to the island's power problem, now on a current level, includes upgrading of existing generators and transmission lines and installation of new equipment, all at the expense of the company. The French group, which has been active in Pacific island utilities, has been the most aggressive in private sector efforts to take over the local power system.

LMA originally propose to manage the power and water systems for 25 years, with an initial investment of $10 million.

In a new proposal presented Sept. 3 to the Governor Pedro P. Tenorio, officials of the Legislature, Commonwealth Utility Corp. and Commonwealth Development Authority, LMA said it could enter into a threeyear contract with the government to solve the power shortage in three years and provide the base for a general improvement of the system.

Each of the two or three phases of the utility program would be independently contracted, with the CNMI retaining absolute discretion.

For its investment, LMA proposes a security arrangement starting with an escrow scheme, replaced later by utility revenues or tax rebates.

Bond disappoints Babauta

Senator Juan N. Babauta expressed disappointment Monday after learning that the money raised from the sale of $140 million worth of Commonwealth Development Authority (CDA) bonds would not be available until Aug. 1, 1987.

would have made sure that vital projects be funded before that time," he said in an interview.

Babauta said that during the passage of the legislative resolution authorizing the issuance of the bonds the Legislature was not informed that the proceeds would not be available within a short time. He said he believed that the government could use the money for capital improvement projects within two months after adoption of the resolution in July.

CDA sold the bonds through Goldman & Sachs using the $126-million development funds under Covenant the second financial package as collateral. The sale of bonds would allow the CNMI to implement needed capital projects early instead of waiting for the receipt of the Covenant funds, which are to be paid by the United States in seven years.

During last week's hearing on the proposed budget of the CDA, Finance Director Rex I. Palacios, also a CDA director, suggested that interim financing be utilized for projects that could not wait for the bond proceeds to become available.

Warranty on used cars will raise prices

A bill which requires dealers to provide 30 to 60 days warranty on used cars will raise used car prices and may kill the trade-in-market, according to the Saipan Chamber of Commerce.

"Any further restrictions by way of unnecessary and excessively restrictive warranty agreements would only lead to further difficulties on a segment of our population who cannot afford the luxury of purchasing new cars," Mrs. Frances T. Demapan, general manager of Joeten Motor Co., said.

The statements were among those received by the Senate Committee on Judiciary, Government and Law which is reviewing Senate Bill 5-79. The bill was introduced by Senate Vice-President Jose Mafnas and Senator Juan T. Guerrero.

Opposition to the bill also came from the Department of Commerce and Labor. "Our economy should be basically a free enterprise system where competition acts as the essential regulator," Commerce and Labor Director Jesus R. Sablan said in a written testimny." The enactment regulating of laws economic affairs or other business transactions should ninimized be unless there is substantial certainty that certain economic forces threaten the general welfare of the community."

"When businesses are overregulated, businesses incur unnecessary costs, and it is the consumer who ultimately pays for those costs," he added.

Lorenzo LG. Cabrera, vice president and general manager of Universe Insurance Underwriters, Inc., proposed that the warranty requirement be expanded to include new cars.

In his testimony, Cabrera said that at present car dealers only offer manufacturer's warranty to buyers. In some instances, he said such warranties were rendered useless because the procedures that accompanied them were never adhered to or followed.

According to Cabrera, automobile insurance accounts for about half of the company's insurance business.

Edward Manibusan, acting Department of Public Safety director, said the bill's provision directing DPS to promulgate rules would only add to the department's burden.

He also noted a possible conflict between the proposed mandatory warranty and an existing law which allows dealers to sell vehicles on an "as is" condition.

Eric Smith, assistant attorney general, proposed the enactment of another law to protect consumers from poor automobile repairs. "It is my belief that much of the automobile repair done on the island is shoddy work," he said.

"If we are going to require used car dealers to have a warranty with their automobiles sales, then I see no reason that the same type of protection cannot be afforded to the public who have their automobiles repaired," Smith said.

Support for the bill came from Rota Mayor Prudencio T. Manglona, Department of Public Health and Environmental Services and Tinian Mayor Ignacio Quichocho

Air Force says Saipan won't be nuclear target

SAIPAN (CNS) — The proposed radar tracking facility in Marpi "would not make the island of Saipan a target in nuclear war," according to Air Force Col. John M. Fabian, director of Space, DCS, Plans and Operations at the Department of the Air Force.

In his Aug. 27 letter to Washington Rep. Froilan C. Tenorio, Col. Fabian said the mission of the proposed radar "is to perform surveillance of all objects in space and to record the splash down down of test launches.

"The mission of the Saipan radar would not differ in peacetime versus war. Additionally, the space surveillance data generated by the Saipan radar would be used along with data from other space surveillance sensors, to compile information on activities in space that would be made available to the United Nations," Col. Fabian stated.

The Air Force officer also stated that the space surveillance network has over 20 sensors, and that Saipan would be only one element out of that number. "Without the central processing facility, the Saipan radar would be worthless," Col. Fabian pointed out, adding that in the event of nuclear war, the target would be the central processing system.

Col. Fabian also declared that the Saipan radar would not support the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) or what is popularly known as the "Star Wars" program. He added the Saipan radar was proposed back in 1981, way before President Reagan announced the "Star Wars" program.

"Furthermore, a radar on Saipan would be in the wrong location to track ballistic missiles headed for the United States, and the radar would lack the fidelity to support ballistic missile defense," Col. Fabian stated in his letter.

The proposed radar racility has generated controversy on Saipan, resulting in a concerned citizens' group circulating a petition against the facility.

One summer day in 1982, a Japanese aboard a ship bound for Yokohama from Nagoya wrote a short message on ruled paper and placed it inside a bottle together with a self-addressed postcard and threw it into the sea.

Four years later and over 1,500 miles away, Rev. Jose Villagomez, out on a fishing trip, took the bottle from the water near Marine Beach. He had to break the bottle to get the contents.

The message, written in Japanese and English, was: "I'm sailing to the port of Yokohama from the port of Nagoya in the summer of 1982.

taining 635 audit findings. The analysis showed that the most prevalent problems in the territories involve fund accountability (296 deficiencies), various program areas (138 deficiencies) and procurement (106 deficiencies).

The audit reports covered eight territorial governments: American Samoa, Virgin Islands, Guam, Palau, Federated States of Micronesia, Marshall Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (TTPI) and the Northern Marianas.

Bloom said that followup audits of the territorial governments determined that sufficient actions were not taken to correct most of the deficiencies. Overall, he said 54 percent of the 1,224 audit recommendations were not implemented.

Bloom said the failure of the territorial governments to implement the audit recommendations had contributed in part to their current fiscal crises and growing budget deficits. He cited the general fund deficit in Guam which he said increased from $50.3 million in October 1982 to $109.4 million in September hours.

Officials describe the increases as unavoidable in the face of dramatically increased costs associated with the Commonwealth health care in recent years. The present real cost to hospitalize a patient at the old hospital is $240 per day, presenting the government with a massive expense to subsidize which with long-term

debts rising from $32.9

million to $118.1 million is far above the current $10-fee paid by patients. The $240 figure breaks down to a $100-daily room rate and a $140daily cost for services and materials ranging from x-rays to meals.

Comparable U.S. mainland rates for a day of inpatient hospitalization average more than $500. Guam Memorial Hospital currently bills the Commonwealth government about $450 a day for CNMI patients sent there. Actual daily patient cost to the government when the new CHC opens is expected to be about $400. As suggested by the language of the proposed regulation, actual charges would be calculated on a case-by-case basis, depending on the ability to pay. No one will be denied medical care for lack of money.

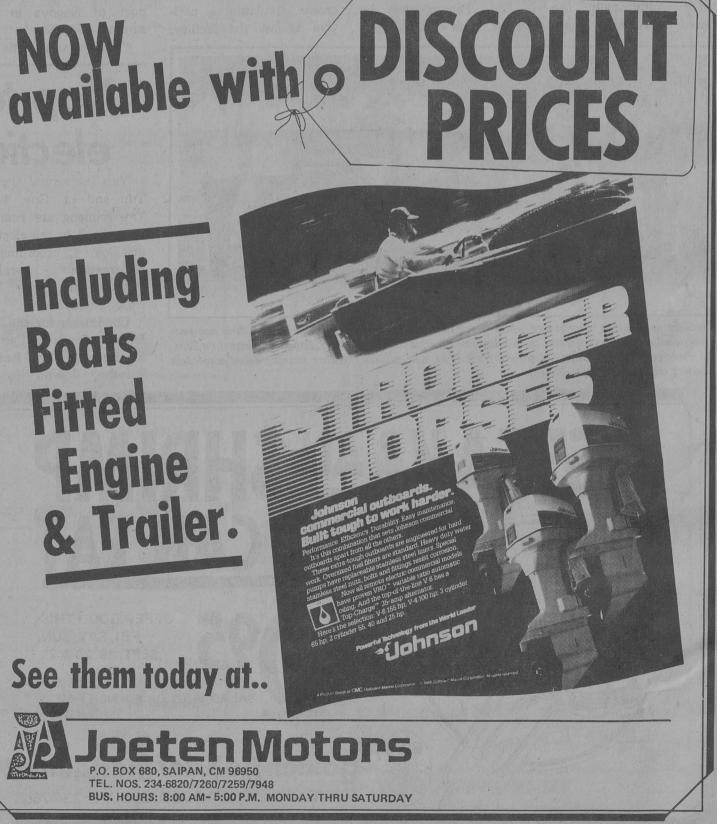

With the upgrading of the Saipan medical facility to U.S. mainland standards comes the need to increase the patient share of actual costs, currently estimated at less than four percent. The budget for the first year operation of the CHC which will include public health and dental services will rise to nearly $12 million compared with about $7 million in fiscal year 1985.

The $30-million health center has been planned and built to specifications qualifying the Commonwealth for full participation in the Federal Medicare and Medicaid programs for the first time. A portion of the increased cost in medical services will be returned to the CNMI through reimbursements under these programs, though strict federal requirements concerning maintenance and a variety of other matters must be satisfied if the facility is to remain qualified for participation.

FHP inaugurates Saipan office

The opening of the new Commonwealth Health Center and the anticipated rise in hospitalization costs could work to the advantage of the Family Health Plan (FHP) which just opened its Saipan marketing office.

Florence Sablan Bocago, FHP marketing representative here, stressed that FHP is not using any speculation about high medical costs at the new hospital in soliciting health plan members. "We're just soliciting membership as we have done before," she said in an interview Tuesday.

The FHP plan used to be marketed here through Associated Insurance. Mrs. Bocago said the firm decided to open its local marketing office when membership reached 1,700.

Everybody is expecting the cost of treatment at the new facility to rise, mainly to help cover costs of operation and maintenance. This, in turn, could encourage people to buy health plans like those offered by FHP, which pays for part or all of the medical costs.

Mrs. Bocago said FHP offers two plans, one in which FHP pays 80 percent of the hospitalization costs, and the other in which FHP pays 100 percent. A member pays $80 a month for plan B (pays 80 percent of hospitalization costs) which provides coverage not only for himself but to his family, including all children up to the age of 18. A child can be covered up to age 23 if he or she is in college.

FHP does not sell individual plans. "We require five members as a minimum in a group for the medical plans," Mrs. Bocago said. A separate plan for dental care costs $39 a month and needs a minimum 10 members for each group.

Payment of premium is through payroll deduction. Government employees pay 100 percent of their premiums while some private companies pay part of their employees' premiums.

Members can get treatment from the Dr. Torres Hospital (or the CHC), at the FHP clinic in Guam or at the Guam Memorial Hospital. Treatment in other facilities need prior approval of the FHP clinic.

Mrs. Bocago said FHP offers lower premium rates to its Saipan members compared to Guam because it does not have a clinic here. She said the firm is also planning to open its own clinic in Saipan in the future.

State preparing new US passports for NMI citizens

SAIPAN (CNS) — Nancy "Sam" K. Finn, program coordinator, Insular Passport Offices at the U.S. Department of State, met with Gov. Pedro P. Tenorio and Lt. Gov. Pedro A. Tenorio Tuesday to brief them on the work being done toward possible issuance of U.S. passports to citizens of the Northern Marianas.

Finn, who arrived last Friday, has been doing research and meeting with Immigration officials of the Trust Territory Government and CNMI. She also visited the courts, churches, and hospital going through their files on births and other information needed for inclusion in passports.

Citizens of the Northern Marianas are expected to receive U.S. passports following termination of the Trusteeship Agreement, under certain provisions of the Covenant

Covenant. The Governor and Lieutenant Governor have been encouraging the U.S. Government to expedite issuance of U.S. passports to CNMI residents. Currently, CNMI residents are issued "Certificates of Identity,"

US agribusiness urged to invest in Asia

(CENTERVIEWS) Asia's remarkable success in agriculture will eventually create greater prosperity and new markets for American goods, but in the short run competition with U.S. agricultural exports may increase. according to economist William "Ted" James, a research associate in the East-West Center's Resource Systems Institute.

"Many Asian countries require strong external markets for their agricultural products," James told a delegation of Kansas legislators who visited the East-West Center in June. "At least half the Asian labor force is engaged in agriculture, and agricultural exports are one-third of total exports in Asia.

"The dilemma is how to have continued growth in Asian agricultural exports and in U.S. agricultural exports at the same time," James said. He suggested that U.S. agribusiness firms undertake more direct investment in Asian agriculture, rather than try to place restrictions on Asian exports. Instead of seeking substitutes, U.S. export interests need to adjust to changing demand patterns in Asia. "As incomes rise in Asia, there eventually will be new markets for U.S. goods, but today Asians are dependent on agricultural exports to finance their economic growth," he said.

James spoke as part of an East-West Center briefing for Kansas Governor John Carlin, members of the Kansas state legislature and business officials returning from a trade mission to Japan, China and Hong Kong. Also addressing the group were Center President Victor Hao Li and RSI Research Associate Charles Morrison.

Li called the outlook "favorable" for Asia because of the region's abundant resource base, rising education and income levels, favorable agricultural climate, and relatively stable political environment. "The leadership is capable," he said. But, he warned, outward-looking development strategies in some Asian countries make them vulnerable to external forces in trade relationships over which they have no control.

"It is vitally important that the two giants in the arean—the United States and Japan—be extremely careful not to allow their bilateral struggles to spill over to all of Asia, upsetting economic efforts of several decades and ultimately undermining the region's highly valued political stability," Li said.

France succeeds in automated train project

Passenger trains without drivers transporting thousands of commuters in major city centers of the world are no longer a science fiction fantasy. In the French town of Lille, a totally automated and unmanned railway has been doing this for over two years without accident. The experiment has been such a great success that another French town, Toulouse, has decided to build a similar metro system.

Writing in the International Labor Review, Avishai Gil of the International Labor Organization (ILO) notes that the falling revenues, stiffer competition. and higher operational costs have made railways and airlines increasingly more economic minded. In recent years staff costs alone have reached between 60 and 90 percent of the operational costs in the labor intensive railways while those in commercial air transport have doubled.

In trying to cut costs and improve operational efficiency, the railways and airlines have turned more and more to new technologies, particularly the latest advances in electronic data processing.

In the railways, the traditionally manual and separate tasks of rail welding, sleeper laying, tamping and ballasting have all been mechanized and combined into a continuous process. A reballasting machine manned by two persons can advance at a speed of 1.6 kilometers per hour, replacing 50 manual workers which, in a country like France, means annual savings of 7.5 million francs. Robots used in the United States have cut costs and improved the quality of work, especially welding.

But the most visible and mony saving measures, however, have been those affecting the size of crews. The introduction of insophisticated creasingly devices and radio equipment for direct communication between drivers and the control centers removed the need for a second crewman even on high speed trains. In the United States, computerized electronic sensors are now replacing the rearend wagon called the "caboose", saving an estimated $1 billion.

As in the case of railways, airlines have been able to apply modern technology to achieve substantial savings in the cost of cockpit crew. Reliable automated communications equipment has already obviated the need for radio operators and the development of inertial navigation systems have led to the phasing out of the flight navigator.

The trend towards the automation and computerization of jobs in rail and air transport is clearly established, says Gil. Unless traffic shows significant increases, new tecn-nologies will create fewer jobs than they eliminate. Overall, employment levels will decline. The structure of the work force will also change, with the phasing out of unskilled jobs and the higher skill requirements of those newly created. The number of simple, undemanding jobs available at present for workers no longer physically fit to occupy their previous posts will drop and it will become harder to re-employ those workers within the enterprise.

"The advent of artificial intelligence will probably mean that computers will encroach upon hitherto untouched areas such as decision-making in air traffic control and train driving in surface railways. Last but not least, there are growing signs that computers that were introduced for technical purposes may be used increasingly in the industrial relations and collective bargaining sphere. This could be the biggest challenge facing management and labor in the future. And the future is already here", notes Mr. Gil.

The ILO is currently engaged in exploring the impact and implications of new technology on the world of work. Its initial research findings tend to substantiate the view that while new technology may destroy jobs in certain industries and sectors, there are prospects of new jobs being created elsewhere in the medium and long term.

Earhart's gravesite found here?

-By Michael L. Graczyk

HOUSTON, Texas (AP) — A U.S. businessman investigating the disappearance of missing aviator Amelia Earhart says he found the womans gravesite next to a breadfruit tree on the island of Saipan. Buddy Brennan, 62, said he excavated the gravesite about one and a half years ago and unearthed a blindfold he claims the Japanese forced Ms. Earhart to wear before she was shot twice in the chest and then buried. Ms. Earhart, Brennan said, was executed by the Japanese in 1944 in Saipan just before U.S. forces invaded the Pacific island. Information provided by island residents led him to the discovery, he said. The lady who had known this for years had been afraid to say anything about it, the Houston real estate investor said Tuesday in an interview. But her nephew, a friend of mine, convinced her she was getting so old, that she should say something now.

However, the co-author of a book about Ms. Earhart says Brennan came up with nothing new. Joe Gervais of Las Vegas, Nevada, co-author of Amelia Earhart Lives, said says others have suggested the aviator was a spy and also produced testimony that she was captured and executed.

Brennan said the woman led him to a site next to the largest breadfruit tree on the island. The area is now a heavy equipment storage yard for utility maintenance in Saipan, which is one of the Mariana Islands.

According to the woman's account, Japanese officials took Ms. Earhart from a motorcycle sidecar, shot her twice and dumped her in a pre-dug hole, Brennan said.

"We were fortunate to get permission to dig at that spot," he said. "We just dug in with front end loader to see what we could find. It's a coral island and knew we couldn't find bones. But we found a khaki blindfold."

Brennan said other people he talked to knew of a woman whose plane either was shot down or crash landed in the area in 1937 on Mili, an atoll in the Marshall Islands.

Others told of a woman being imprisoned on the island, of Ms. Earhart's navigator, Fred Noonan, being treated for a leg injury suffered in the crash, and of seeing a boat transporting a silver airplane with a missing wing, Brennan said.

Ms. Earhart, the first woman to fly acorss the Atlantic, was attempting an around-the-world flight with Noonan in 1937 when their plane disappeared.

"Amelia, in my opinion, was on a spy mission," Brennan said. "President (Franklin) Roosevelt knew the Marshall Islands were being fortified, but the Japanese had denied the ability of the Americans to come into the Marshall Islands."

Brennan said his search for clues to Ms. Earhart's demise began in 1979, and has spent about $100,000 on it so far.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Department of Education (DOE) is requesting for proposal to demolish the old Japanese cement building at Oleai Elementary School in Saipan.

The Board of Education in July approved a recommendation to demolish the old structure because it is dangerous to students and staff going to the school. The recommendation was subsequently approved by Governor Pedro P. Tenorio.

DOE requests any company or person who wish to demolish the building to submit their proposal to the Office of the Superintendent of Education at the Central Education Office at Lower Base at the earliest time possible.

The Department wishes the following information to be in the proposal: cost breakdown, site clearing, security fence, methods of demolition considering safety requirements, and the length of time it will take to complete the project.

Time that the demolition should take place is after 3 p.m. on the weekdays or on Saturdays and Sundays when students are not on the school campus.

Any person or company wishing to demolish the old Japanese building at Oleai school should send their proposal to the Education Department right away.

NZ deputy PM hits terrorist states

by Keith Lorenz Centerviews newswriter

(CENTERVIEWS) — The worst kinds of terrorism are those carried out by states, according to New Zealand Deputy Prime Minister Geoffrey W.R. Palmer, who spoke in July at the East-West Center.

"These acts undermine the very fabric of international law and cooperation," he said. "On this matter we stand in total agreement with the United States in its denouncement of governments which carry out or facilitate terrorist acts."

Terrorist violence has now spread to every corner of the globe, even to the normally tranquil shores- of New Zealand, Palmer observed at an EWC luncheon, cosponsored by the Pacific and Asian Affairs Council. He stressed the importance of international law in dealing with acts of terrorism—whether the acts be perpetrated by a state or by single fanatics or groups of zealots.

"I hope that it will be recognized in due course that the most important outcome of the recent arbitration over the Rainbow Warrior between New Zealand and France was the acceptance in international law of the responsibility for the illegal act that was done," Palmer said. "A precedent has been set, and France's acceptance of the ruling of the United Nations secretary-general in this matter will be seen as of fundamental importance for the future."

Two French agents, convicted of blowing up the Greenpeace research vessel in Auckland harbor in July 1985, have been released to France. They are serving time on a tiny atoll within the French atomic testing area of Polynesia.

Palmer acknowledged that public opinion has "wholly not been favorable" to his government's agreement to follow the decision of U.N. arbitration and return the foreign agents after the French government admitted to state involvement in the affair. However, he felt that in the long run this action would be seen in the best interest of achieving an international standard toward combating the terrorist scourge.

In response to a question, Palmer named Libya to his category of "rogue states"--states that "ignore the United Nations, won't accept international responsibility for the actions of [their] personnel, or worse, flaunt the acts of terrorism with pride."

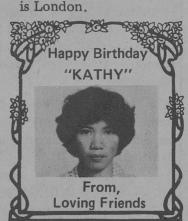

He cautioned, however, that the response that is called for—and which is sanctioned by the U.N. charter in its definition of self-defense—must be reasonable and proportionate to the danger. He reminded the audience that in international law, as in domestic law, the use of force "or other extreme measures in self-defense is not easily justified."

Palmer said New Zealand believes that the U.S. mining of Nicaragua's harbors is contrary to international law and his government cannot support the general policy of the United States towards Nicaragua.

He also said the military raids by South Africa into neighboring countries cannot be condoned. The apartheid regime is unlawful by the standards of international law, and South Africa is not a legitimiate regime.

On the matter of whether New Zealand intends to withdraw from the ANZUS pact with the U.S. and Australia, Palmer emphasized that it was a stated position of the Labor Government when it contested the last election that it would not have nuclear weapons in New Zealand. Neither does the government support energy based on nuclear propulsion, he said. But the policy of banning nuclear vessels should not be construed as anti-American, or anti-British, he said; rather, New Zeland's position is that the ANZUS defense pact was based on the deployment of conventional weapons. His government has not pulled out of ANZUS and doesn't intend to, he said, although the U.S. government says that New Zealand is not meeting its obligations. [On Aug. 11 the United States announced it had formally ended its defense ties with New Zealand-Ed.]

As to whether New Zealand shared the same fear voiced by the United States about Soviet encroachments in the Pacific, the deputy prime minister said, "The Pacific is very vast. The problems of the Southwest Pacific are not necessarily the same as the problems of other parts of the Pacific. New Zealand is as far from the Soviet base at Cam Ranh Bay as is London

tribute to Borja, the statesman

Sunday is the moment for grateful leaders and people to pay their last respects to a man who gave more than half of his lifetime for the service of an emerging nation. The wreath-lined and carpeted aisle leads to the white coffin in front of the altar at Mt. Carmel, where speeches by Commonwealth and Guam leaders recall Olympio T. Borja's accomplishments in business, in government and as a human being.

With him departed, the last testimonies to his role in building the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas are given to his wife and family.

Praises for the departed loved one bring happiness, but also tears that mix joy and sadness.

And then it is time to wife out the tears and lay the departed to his rest.

Pacific islands face technological dilemma

BANGKOK (UNIS) — Developing Pacific island countries, due mainly to small markets and lack of trained manpower, are faced with a dilemma on the kind of technology needed for their economic development.

Their problem was among those discussed at a workshop on technological and management needs for industrial development in the Commonwealth countries of the Asia-Pacific region, held here from July 28 — Aug. 1.

The Director of Vanuatu's Department of Industry, Japin Tari, said that traditional technology uses little capital ad is highly labor intensive, but productivity is very low. On the other hand, imported technology brings in economy in production, but it requires large capital and creates less jobs.

Skills for operating high technology, along with the necessary support infrastructure, often do not exist in the islands, he added. Tari said that Vanuatu has relied on "intermediate technology, which is more labor intensive than high technology and more efficient than traditional techniques." It can also make use of local materials.

In Papua New Guinea, Secretary for Industrial Development Wep Kanawi noted a "dualism" in technological development, with the mining and plantation sectors using sophisticated technology from developed countries, and the traditional socioeconomic sector availing only of subsistence or rudimentary productive services.

The Government of Papua New Guinea, said Kanawi, has laid down a policy that use of technology should "create employment, long-term development, self-reliance and equity and participation by all Papua New Guineans in the country's development."

In Western Samoa, Senior Development Officer Ms. Lucia Sefo said that the major problem with respect to technology transfer and, consequently, to industrial development in general, is the shortage of labor, management and entrepreneural skills.

Ms. Sefo said that Western Samoa has a small manufacturing sector, but several import-substituting industries have lately been established.

"Exposure visits by businessmen of Tonga to overseas industries located in developing countries have assisted in introducing the type of technology needed for local projects," Tonga's Secretary for Labor and Commerce J.W. Harris, told the meeting.

He said that in Tonga there are more than a hundred industries engaged in the manufacture of a variety of products for domestic and overseas markets. The technology used for most of the existing industries is low capital and labor intensive, except for a few export-oriented industries,

12 nations list action program

BANGKOK (UNIS) — A package of action programs for promoting industrial advancement of developing Asia-Pacific countries through the transfer of technology and management skills, has been recommended by a 12-nation workshop just concluded here.

The package calls for, among other things, establishment of a system for facilitating the transfer of technology, improvement of research and development programs and development of a monitoring system to assess the benefits from technology transfer.

Aside from the action programs, the workshop report also contained a request for the Working Group on Industry of the Commonwealth Heads of Government Regional Meeting (CHOGRM) to assist its 18 member countries in obtaining technologies "best suited to their needs."

The five-day workshop on assessment of the technological needs of developing countries in the region was organized jointly by the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) and CHOGRM. The CHOGRM membership comprises Australia, Brunei

Darussalam, Fiji, India, Kiribati, Malaysia, Maldives, Nauru, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu, Vanuatu and Western Samoa.

Executive ESCAP Secretary S.A.M.S. Kibria stressed, in his opening statement on July 28, the need for genuine commitment to technology on the part of developing countries, as well as for measures to effectively transfer technology and, thus, ensure maximum use of human resources. Existing infrastructures for research and development are also inadequately linked to industry, he said.

"Planners and policy makers fall short in their ability to zero in on actual technological needs consistent with industrialization priorities," Kibria said. Education in technology and industrial management, he deplored, belongs exclusively to a small group of elites "who are divorced from the realities of the day."

Representatives from Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Fiji, India, Kiribati, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, Tonga and Vanutu took park in the workshop.

Slums to swamp Third World cities, ILO says

By the year 2000 just over a decade from now — most of the major Third World cities may find themselves virtually swamped by expanding slums of ramschackle huts and rural migrants unless the authorities initiate immediate measures to tackle the problem of urban housing, according to a recent International Labor Organization (ILO) study.

Compared with about 972 million urban inhabitants in 1980, the cities of the developing countries across the world would have some 2,116 million people by the turn of the century if present migratory and growth trends continue. The majority will be living in squatter settlements with no modern facilities or basic amenities.

These "cities" could provide fertile breeding ground for crime, social and economic unrest misery. The only way to forestall such a disaster is to start now - by intelligent planning and effecincome-generating tive programs — to transform existing slums into decent neighborhoods and make it possible for the inhabitants to afford such appropriate housing, says S.V. Sethuraman, author of the ILO study.

There are 70 major cities in the Third World with sizeable squatter settlements. In 16 of these cities 21 to 30 percent of the population live in slums while in 12 cities the figure is above 61 percent. It has been estimated that $116 billion is needed to provide these slum households with basic amenities by the year 2000.

Most urban slums represent vast reservoirs of underutilized manpower. In fact, the levels of unemployment in the city slums are far higher than the national average in most countries.

It is not beyond the capacity of the developing countries, even with their limited resources, to clean up these urban eyesores, the study says. What is required is a careful husbanding of available resources and their intelligent utilization. Shelters with basic amenities for the hundreds of millions who live in these slums can be provided if the unemployed and underemployed among the settlers build their own homes. Tapping their labor would reduce the costs and at the same time could contribute to the easing of a major sociological problem in the urban centers of the Third World.

The idea of using construction to stimulate development is not new. It was tried out, with some success, in Colombia during the 1970s. In the context of housing for the urban poor, says the study, it is not clear whether a strategy to augment and improve shelter and related services can also simultaneously contribute to the employment and income of the poor.

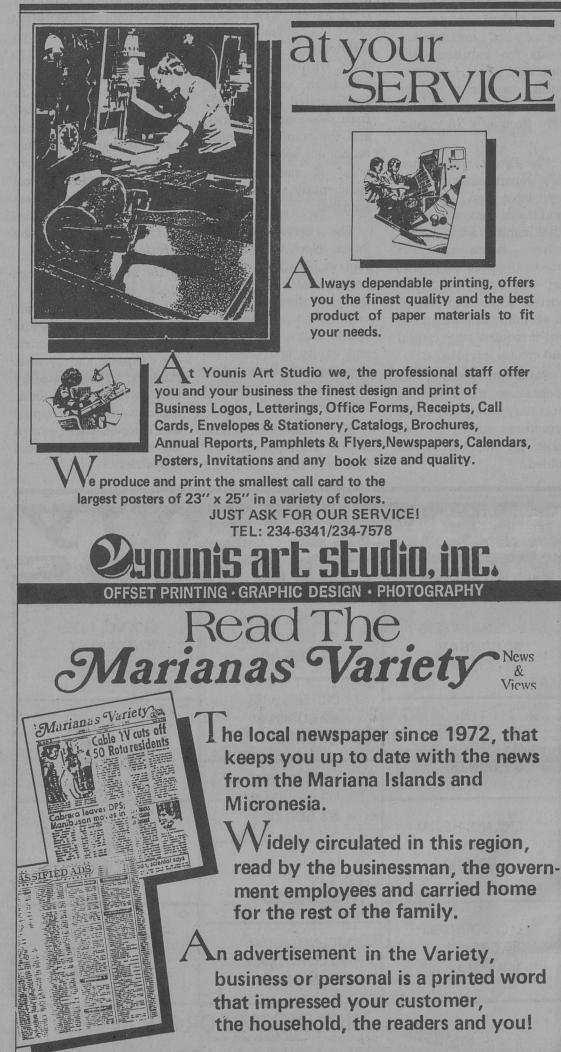

Experience of some developing countries does give room for optimism, however. An analysis of the low-cost housing in Ghana suggests that 30 percent of the cost of such houses was for labor used directly in the construction with an additional 11 percent for labor used indirectly in the production and distribution of construction materials. Each housing unit, the analysis showed, required a total of 17.4 manmonths of labor.

This estimate was for "formal" housing - with all the amenities such as plumbing and kitchens requiring a certain share of skilled labor. In the case of basic housing units for the poor, the share of skilled labor may be proportionately less. Nevertheless, there can be little doubt that letting the slum dwellers build their own houses would not only generate employment for themselves but also contribute to the upgrading of whatever skills they may possess.

If the estimated $116 billion is anywhere near the accurate cost of providing basic housing units for all the slum dwellers across the developing world, and if the inhabitants of these settlements are put to work on building their homes, their share of the total investment, in terms of wages, may range from $23 billion to $39 billion. To this should be added the employment generated indirectly through production and distribution of construction materials, which could bring the overall total wage income to between $35 billion and $60 billion in 1975 prices. Depending on the prevailing wage rates, this means that up to 120 million man-years of work can be generated through this scheme.

But, as the study notes, the scheme poses a formidable challenge to the planners in the developing countries. First, there is the need to mobilize $116 billion. Equally important is the need to stimulate adequate demand for the housing units particularly from the poorest sections of the residents.

Amateur sports receive MVB help

The Marianas Visitors Bureau presented Bill Sakovich, president of the Northern Marianas Sports Association, a check for $1,800 to upgrade its programs and other projects.

The fund was raised through contributions by the bureau's members and private businesses at the 3rd Annual Tourism Ayuda Sports Run held May 18.

"The run was organized as part of the CNMI Tourism Week to increase the awareness of tourism benefits to the community. We are proud to say that we have raised over $4,000 in the past three years which have all been contributed to the sports association," said Priscilla Torres, MVB Membership & Community Development coordinator.

According to Sakovich, a good portion of MVB's contribution will go towards CNMI participation in the 1987 South Pacific Games in New Caledonia.

MVB extends on behalt of the Northern Marianas Amateur Sports Association appreciation to the following companies which contributed to the success of the Tourism Ayuda Sports Run: Microl Corporation, Nippon Express, Duty Free Shoppers, Town House, R & C Tours, J.C. Tenorio Ent., Marianas Aqua Sports, Mas Mauleg Corporation, Continental Air Micronesia, Joeten Motors, MITA Travel, Diamond Tour, Japan Airlines, Jetour, Hyatt Regency, Saipan Beach Hotel, RIC Tours, JALPAK, Hakubotan, KCNM Radio, West Coast Ent., Bank of Saipan, M.S.
